ERA National Code of Ethics

The Electronics Representatives Association of manufacturers' representatives in the electronics industry was established to serve our industry, principals and customers and to foster member interaction with one another in a professional and constructive manner.

• Conduct

Representatives will conduct themselves and their businesses in a professional and honorable manner that reflects credit upon themselves, the manufacturer, customer, association, other manufacturers' representatives and the entire industry.

• Contracts

Representatives will respect and honor the negotiated contracts of principals represented. They will refrain from deception or misrepresentation of any price or product, or concealing pertinent facts. They will give the same service to customers and principals that they expect from their own organization.

• Support

Representatives will support the efforts of their colleagues, chapters and international association to set standards for their profession through example, education and training to promote and protect the free enterprise system.

• Honor

Whereas it is acceptable and routine for manufacturers' representatives to advertise and promote their capabilities, a representative should refrain from soliciting manufacturers with the objective of encouraging a principal to break a contractual relationship with another representative.

• Respect

A representative shall not directly or indirectly solicit the services or affiliation of an employee of another representative without proper notice to the other organization.

• Confidentiality

Representatives will respect the confidentiality entrusted to them by principals, distributors, customers and fellow representatives.

I hereby state that the information given in this application is, to the best of my knowledge, factual and true, and that our company agrees to uphold this Code of Ethics.
